Fall is the perfect time to visit Whistler, a season when you can take time to slow down, unwind and work up a healthy appetite playing in the refreshingly crisp mountain air. With so many award-winning restaurants to choose from, you can curb just about any craving from a host of diverse dining options championing organic, locally sourced ingredients.

The Whistler community celebrates the best of the fall season with an enticing mix of arts, culinary and mountain culture events. And while the resort's selection of restaurants & pubs is sure to please everyone's palette, it's best to plan ahead and make a reservation as some establishments may have reduced hours and operating days.

October is also Whistler Craft Beer Month, with all 31 days devoted to weeks of sudsy exploration and fun. Various craft beer-themed experiences — suitable for everyone from ale enthusiasts to casual tasters — are on tap, including exclusive tastings, Battle of the Beer cocktail dinners, brewmaster dinners and much more.

New this season is the Whistler Distillery Tour & Tasting Experience, which takes liquor lovers to Function Junction, a 10-minute drive south of Whistler, where you'll enjoy a guided tour of the Montis Distillery which opened in 2019. The tour includes a full tasting hour and the option to add a personal characteric beer to pair during your tasting. Upon returning to Whistler Village, each guest will receive an exclusive food & cocktail deal for use at Whistler's premier cocktail bar, The Raven Room.

In other news, fans of Joe Fortes Seafood & Chop House, a Vancouver dining institution for over three decades, will be pleased to learn that the legendary eatery has just opened its new Whistler location.

Finally, what gourmand can resist the crown jewel of Whistler's culinary calendar — Cornucopia, the resort's much-loved celebration of food and drink. Cornucopia is the ultimate feast for the senses, from festive food and drink tastings and intimate chef luncheons to exclusive winemaker dinners and plenty of after-hours fun. This year, weekends throughout November are dedicated to discovering bold new tastes, taking palate-pleasing journeys and savouring innovative takes on classic cuisine.

Bon appétit, everyone!
